CEMES: CALL FOR APPLICATIONS FOR RESEARCH GROUPS

CEMES will (re)constitute its research groups for the coming three years (2020-2022) and hereby invites all researchers in European Studies and modern European history interested in creating a research group to send in applications.

The topic of a research group should deal with modern Europe as defined on the CEMES homepage and strive for interdisciplinary approaches. Each group should have two research leaders and coordinate a number of research activities in the group (see CEMES report). These should include hosting 3-4 annual research seminars, conferences and/or author-meets-critics (see past events). The research groups have, in recent years, become crucial hubs for the development of applications for external funding, and new applicants should emphasize their plans and ambitions in this respect. The funding of the research group activities will be covered by CEMES on an annual basis and will depend on the number of applications that the CEMES Steering Group approves. However, based on prior experiences, we expect to fund each group with 25,000 to 30,000 DKK annually.

We would thus like to receive proposals (including a short text on the topic of the group, the names of two proposed research leaders including a brief cv, the names of up to 15 researchers at KU and beyond that could join the network.) The application should not exceed five pages.

Deadline for submission is 15 November 2019 and proposals should be sent to centre coordinator Haakon A. Ikonomou: ikonomou@hum.ku.dk. The decision will be taken immediately after and sent out towards the end of November.

On behalf of the CEMES Steering Group and Centre Chair Niklas Olsen.
